Simple ways To Protect Yourself From Hackers

Where was the last public place you visited that had Wi-Fi? These days, nearly every coffee shop, library, airport and hotel offer a way to access the internet from your cell phone or other mobile device. That means the information you have on your phone could be available to hackers in the area – unless you've taken steps to protect your data. Here are a few recommendations:

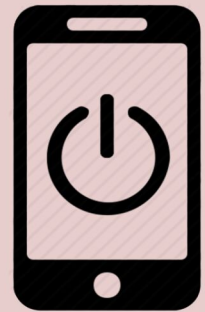

1. Don't access personal or financial data with public Wi-Fi.

This may seem like a no-brainer, but you'd be surprised how many people check their bank accounts or make purchases with a credit card while using public Wi-Fi. It's best to do those things on a secure connection.

2. Turn off anything you don't need.

Hackers can use certain features on your phone to get at your information, location or connection. So, instead of keeping your GPS, wireless connection and geo-tracking on all the time, just turn them on when you need them.

3. Choose your apps wisely.

Only download apps from trustworthy sources that have established a good reputation. Make sure you update your software and apps regularly and get rid of old apps you don't use.

Ethiopian Meskel Celebration

The Ethiopia Meskel celebration is an annual religious holiday in the Ethiopian Orthodox church, and is held to commemorate the supposed discovery of the True Cross upon which Jesus was crucified by the Romans. The legend goes that in the 4th century BC the Roman Empress Helena received a vision in a dream telling her where to find the cross. She ordered the people of Jerusalem to collect wood, and the smoke from a huge bonfire apparently indicated the location where the cross was buried. The True Cross Meskel celebration is considered the most important religious holiday in Ethiopia, largely because it's believed that a piece of the cross Saint Helena discovered was brought to Ethiopia, and is housed in the mountains of Amba Geshen.

The Irreecha Festival

Irreecha is chiefly a thanksgiving festival celebrating the end of the winter and monsoon months in Oromia region in the south-central area of the country. During the months preceding there is cold weather and heavy rains. There is also an increased prevalence of diseases like Malaria which makes it more difficult to visit family and friends.

However, once this period of difficulty comes to an end and the harvest begins, it is marked by this festival of thanks by the locals. The celebration itself commemorates the arrival of Birra (the name for spring in the region) and blessings enjoyed by people over the past year. Locals dress in traditional costumes and observe Irreecha with dancing, singing, and gathering together with relatives.
